The ideas I want to preserve are big, clear buttons, the buttons what will add the search result to the plan and the structure of the plan. The suggestions from my peer such as making fork part clearer and making search-add-map combinations are great. And I put all of those into my wireframe. There are several things I improved from my sketches. For example, I added the map to search and plan part which make the plan less abstract. Also, I added some details such as "head back to last page" button which will connect different screens. I also added "check mark" and "add" button so that user will clearly understand the connection between those pages.